Jeanie Wyatt served as Chairman of STMM until her passing in April 2019, prior to which she and the STMM Management team, along with her family, chose CAPTRUST to fulfill her succession plan and continue her legacy.

Speaking on behalf of Wyatt’s family and STMM, Jeanie’s stepson Richey Wyatt stated, “When Jeanie, her son Trey, and I, along with the STMM management team mapped out the succession plan that eventually led us to CAPTRUST, we explicitly did so based on two guiding principles: What is best for our clients, and what is best for our employees. Under Jeanie’s leadership, we unanimously agreed in a thorough process that CAPTRUST was our ideal strategic partner.”

“As an employee-owned and community focused firm with a sizeable wealth management practice and the highest ethical standards, CAPTRUST's culture matches ours," said Lance Lahourcade, managing director and STMM partner. "Partnering with CAPTRUST allows the STMM investment strategy to carry forward under our local leadership with no disruption to the services our clients are accustomed to, and we are confident that this partnership is a wonderful opportunity for STMM clients, employees, and the communities we serve."

In joining forces, STMM's clients will have access to CAPTRUST's deep bench of resources, services, and technology that will enhance the client experience. The transaction is expected to close in early September.

"From our first meeting with the team at South Texas Money Management, it was clear that they approach working with their clients with the same level of enthusiasm and care that has become a hallmark of CAPTRUST's services," said CAPTRUST founder and CEO J. Fielding Miller. "The team from South Texas Money Management perfectly embodies the spirit and ambition that we envision for the future of CAPTRUST and we look forward to building on this firm's impressive legacy in Texas for years to come."
